

Why Buy from Local Farms?

Good for the environment

The average food product from the grocery store has traveled 1300 miles to get to your dinner plate. Farms produce food and fiber, protect open space and provide wildlife habitat, all contributing to our quality of life.

Food Security

Supporting local farms helps secure our future. A reliable local supply of food is important for times of scarcity, threats of terrorism, and global food contamination issues. All farms of various sizes occupy important niches in the fabric of today's agricultural landscape.

Good for the local economy

Farms help keep taxes low as they require fewer community services as "cows and corn don't go to school". Each dollar earned on the farm multiplies 4 times in the local economy- support services for farms are mainly locally owned businesses.
